Sources and inputs — companion to the valuation study of 9 August 2026

WHAT THIS DOCUMENT IS. Every number in the valuation study, with where it came from. It exists so a reader can check any figure without taking the study's word for it, and so that the line between what the company reported and what this study assumed is visible rather than implied.

THE RULE THIS STUDY FOLLOWS. Everything Americana itself reports — every income-statement, balance-sheet, cash-flow, segment and note figure — is taken only from the company's own audited consolidated financial statements, its reviewed interim statements and its own investor materials. No data vendor, broker note or news report is used as a source for any of it. Outside sources appear for market prices, sovereign risk premiums and peer multiples, and each is labelled where it is used.

1 Primary documents

All of the following were obtained from the company's own investor-relations library at americanarestaurants.com and read directly. Page and note references appear against individual inputs in section 3.

Two further access attempts are recorded for completeness. The Abu Dhabi Securities Exchange company page returned an automated-access refusal to this environment; it was not needed, because every document the exchange would carry is published by the company itself. A daily history for the Abu Dhabi general index was sought from the machine-readable sources available — the Yahoo index quote returns one observation and no history, and the main data portals refused automated access — and not obtained; the consequence for the beta, and its sizing, is in section 1.8 of the study.

2 Outside sources, and what each is used for

Source	Form	What it supplies	Scope
Aswath Damodaran, NYU Stern — country default spreads and risk premiums, July 2026 edition (published 15 July 2026)	read from the original data file	the equity risk premium for each of the twelve operating countries, on both the ratings and the credit-default-swap basis	cost of capital only
US Treasury daily par yield curve	close of 7 August 2026, read from the Treasury CSV	the risk-free rate	cost of capital only
IMF World Economic Outlook, retrieved 9 August 2026	through the IMF DataMapper interface	inflation and real growth for each operating country, which set the currency drag and anchor terminal growth	forecast drivers only
Abu Dhabi sovereign US dollar issue, February 2026	final re-offer spread of 25 basis points over Treasuries on the ten-year tranche (price thoughts opened at 55)	a cross-check that the company's own borrowing rate sits above its sovereign	cross-check only
Peer market data, retrieved 9 August 2026	trailing figures as published	the peer multiple table	cross-check only — no peer figure enters the valuation
FTSE ADX General Index daily history, 3,884 sessions from January 2011	supplied 10 August 2026, screened before use	the regressor in the beta calculation — the index of the exchange the shares trade on	cost of capital only
Tadawul All Share Index daily history	retrieved 9 August 2026	a disclosed beta cross-check, and the regressor this study's first edition used before the Abu Dhabi index history was available	cross-check only

No outside source supplies any figure Americana itself reports. The distinction matters: a sovereign risk premium is not something the company can tell us, and a peer's multiple is not something we would take from the company anyway.

3 Every input in the study

Grouped by research layer. Company figures are the company's own reported numbers; country and industry figures are external and named; house estimates are this study's own judgements and are marked as such, with the reasoning shown.

The residual brand revenue is total audited revenue less the four disclosed power brands, so the brand build ties to the audited total by construction in both years. The opening mix is the company's own new-restaurant pie (KFC 40%, Hardee's 16%, Pizza Hut 15%, Krispy Kreme 12%, other 17%).

terminal roic	0.3	2026-06-30	Terminal return on incremental invested capital, faded to 30% from the model-implied average of ~55%. Anchored on the company's own store-economics disclosure: USD 402 thousand average capital cost and a 3.0-year average payback imply roughly a 33% pre-tax cash-on-cash return on the AVERAGE new store, and the same table shows the MARGINAL brands (Pizza Hut, Krispy Kreme, growth brands) beyond five years — materially below the average. Continuing the average net-book return into perpetuity was the largest judgement defect raised in the critique round, conceded in the study's own expert cross-examination; the fade prices it. The 55% continuation is published as the bull reading in the sensitivity.

spot aed	2.23	2026-08-07	Closing price on the Abu Dhabi Securities Exchange, 7 August 2026 (open 2.26, high 2.26, low 2.21), from the daily price history used throughout this study
beta	1.026	2026-08-10	Ordinary least squares regression of 185 complete weekly logarithmic returns of the company's own Abu Dhabi-listed shares against the FTSE ADX General Index — the index of the exchange the shares trade on — over windows labelled 23 December 2022 to 24 July 2026. That is the whole life of the listing, the company having floated in December 2022, and no observation after the 7 August 2026 price anchor enters the sample; the index history supplied ends on 24 July 2026, so the window closes there. Standard error 0.254, t-statistic 4.04, R-squared 8.2%: the regression clears the usability gate of at least 24 observations, R-squared of at least 5% and a standard error below the absolute coefficient. Stock and index are struck at the same closing auction on the same exchange in the same currency, so no timing correction applies; computed anyway as a check, the lead-lag sum is 0.934, which is close enough to confirm there is nothing to correct. The index series was screened before use: 3,884 sessions from January 2011 to July 2026, 250 a year, no duplicate dates, no non-positive levels, largest single-session move 8.8%, and a weekday pattern that shows the January 2022 trading-week change. That the index measures its market is checked rather than assumed — regressed identically, Aldar returns 1.58, Emaar 1.50, Abu Dhabi

			Commercial Bank 1.36 and the defensive food company Agthia 0.42, so property and banking run above the index while a consumer staple runs well below it, and this restaurant operator sits at the market average. The precision is modest and is stated as such: one standard error spans 0.77 to 1.28, so this estimate cannot be distinguished from the 0.894 the first edition used. Cross-checks, all disclosed and none adopted: the company's Saudi line against the Saudi index gives 0.894, which was the first edition's input, chosen because no Abu Dhabi index history could be obtained at the time and superseded now that it can; an equally weighted composite of eighteen covered UAE names gives 0.586; and two UAE-listed consumer peers give a median of 0.574. The composite is a diagnostic and never the regressor: it is a selection-biased subset of names whose own sector mix would stand in for the market, and this company is one of its constituents, so the shares would be regressed partly against themselves.
days to anchor	219	2026-08-07	Calendar days from the 31 December 2025 valuation date — the audited balance sheet the bridge deducts net debt at, and the date the year-1 discount factor runs from — to the 7 August 2026 price anchor. Every published per-share value is rolled forward across this window at the cost of equity, net of the dividend paid inside it, so the valuation and the market price are compared on the same date. The first delivery omitted this roll (the model-study convention) entirely — the largest single correction of the critique-response round, found by self-audit.

terminal growth	0.03	2026-08-09	Long-run growth in US dollars. The pegged Gulf markets that produce most of the revenue are projected by the IMF at about 2% inflation from 2028 onward, and a mature restaurant estate can add roughly one point of real volume on top. The figure is deliberately set far below the risk-free rate, which is the ceiling any perpetual growth assumption has to respect. Input	Value	Date	Source and construction nso mix	UAE 0.26; Saudi Arabia 0.3; Kuwait 0.06; Egypt 0.12	2026-07-28	Allocation of net new restaurants across markets. Set from where the estate has actually been growing: over the eighteen months to 30 June 2026 Saudi Arabia and the UAE together took roughly 56% of net additions, and the split here holds that shape. An estimate at the allocation step only — the total is the company's own guidance, and the group revenue result is insensitive to the split because revenue per restaurant differs across markets by less than the growth rates do.

FY2026 is set just below the 6.3% the company actually delivered in the first half and consistent with its own guidance of mid-single-digit like-for-like growth for the full year; the path then converges toward the roughly 2% long-run inflation the IMF projects for the pegged Gulf markets plus continued menu and mix work. The path converges on the 15% Pillar Two minimum plus a modest drag for withholding taxes and non-deductible items, which is where a group of this footprint settles once every jurisdiction has adopted the rules. payout ratio	0.85	2026-07-28	Dividend payout ratio. The board declared USD 201.6 million against FY2025, which the company states is 91.99% of net profit, and has already declared USD 100.8 million as an interim against 2026. The forecast holds 85%, a little below the FY2025 rate, because the estate is still growing. weight dcf	0.5	2026-08-09	Weight on the cash-flow lens. It carries the most because the business is cash-generative, the estate is knowable restaurant by restaurant, and the company publishes the store-level economics the model is built on.
weight relative	0.2	2026-08-09	Weight on relative multiples. Held down because no clean comparable exists: the global names are franchisors, not operators.
weight normalised	0.2	2026-08-09	Weight on normalised earnings power.
weight book	0.1	2026-08-09	Weight on book value and sustainable return. The lowest, because an operator that leases its estate carries very little book equity and the lens is correspondingly unstable here.

316 inputs in total. Every one carries a value, a source, a date and a layer; the build refuses to run if any of the four is missing.

4 Judgements, and what would overturn each one

These are the places where this study exercised judgement rather than read a number. Each is stated with the evidence behind it and the observation that would prove it wrong.

The judgement	What it rests on	What would overturn it
The margin gain is structural (the base case), and the cyclical reading is published beside it	The company names procurement scale, menu optimisation and improving delivery economics, and the cost of food and packaging has fallen for four consecutive quarters. The same evidence is consistent with a favourable turn in traded food prices.	Food and packaging cost back above 29% of revenue for two consecutive quarters. The study does not resolve this — it computes both readings, AED 2.06 against AED 1.77.
Leases are treated as debt, with right-of-use additions charged as investment	It is how the accounts present them, and it is internally consistent as long as taking a lease is charged as investment rather than only depreciated.	Nothing much — this was computed both ways and the answer moves by 0.7%. The judgement turns out not to matter, which is itself worth knowing.
Beta of 1.026, from the company's own shares against the FTSE ADX General Index	185 weekly observations over the whole life of the listing, standard error 0.254, t-statistic 4.04, R-squared 8.2%. The index of the exchange the shares trade on, same session and same currency, so no timing correction applies; the lead-lag sum is 0.934, confirming as much. The index behaves as an index: Aldar 1.58, Emaar 1.50, Agthia 0.42.	A longer history, or a materially different estimate on one. The standard error is wide — one error band spans 0.77 to 1.28 — and three disclosed alternatives sit inside or below it: the Riyadh line against the Saudi index 0.894 (this study's FIRST edition used that figure, when no Abu Dhabi index history could be obtained), a composite of UAE names 0.586, UAE consumer peers 0.574.
Cost of debt of 6.72%, the company's own lease borrowing rate	The company has no bank debt. Its lease finance cost over its average lease liability is the only borrowing rate it actually pays, and determining that rate is a key audit matter in the filing.	A bond or bank facility priced away from this level. The 2024 accounts give 5.95% on the same construction, so the figure is stable.
Terminal growth of 3.0% in US dollars	The IMF projects about 2% long-run inflation in the pegged Gulf markets that produce most of the revenue; a mature estate can add roughly a point of real volume. The figure is set well below the risk-free rate, which is the ceiling any perpetual growth rate must respect.	Nothing observable in the short run. It is sensitised from 2.0% to 4.0% in the study, a range worth about 0.37 dirhams a share.
Effective tax rate rising from 14.5% to 16.0%	The rate went 4% to 11% to 14% over three years as the United Arab Emirates introduced corporate tax and the first domestic minimum top-up taxes landed; the first half of 2026 ran at 14.1%. The company publishes the jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction position.	The remaining jurisdictions not adopting the minimum, or the group securing reliefs. Worth about 1.8% of value per two points of tax.
Net new restaurants of 125 in 2026, then a taper to 120	The 2026 figure is the midpoint of the company's own published guidance of 120 to 130. The taper reflects a maturing estate.	Openings running materially above or below guidance. A 20% change in the programme is worth about 2.2% of value.
The allocation of new restaurants across markets	The company guides the total but does not publish the split. The allocation follows where the estate has grown over the last eighteen months.	A published country split that differs. This is the one estimate inside the revenue build, and the group result is insensitive to it because growth rates differ across markets by more than revenue per restaurant does.
Lens weights of 50 / 20 / 20 / 10	The cash-flow lens carries most because the estate is knowable restaurant by restaurant and the company publishes the store-level economics. The book lens carries least because an operator that leases its estate holds almost no book equity.	Nothing observable. The weights are stated so a reader who disagrees can re-weight: every lens value is published separately.

5 What was looked for and not found

A source list that only records what was located is misleading. These categories were searched and returned nothing that would change a number.

6 Discrepancies between sources, and how they were resolved

The discrepancy	How it was resolved
Restaurant count at 31 December 2025: 2,749 in the presentation appendix against 2,709 in the portfolio-evolution chart on the same page	The two are both correct and measure different things: 2,709 is the organic estate and 2,749 includes the 40 net restaurants that arrived with the Pizza Hut Oman acquisition. The study uses 2,749, which is the estate that generates revenue, and builds the forecast on the organic guidance so the acquisition is not double-counted.
Net working capital: the company reports USD (248) million; a narrow definition of trade payables alone gives USD (180) million	The company's own aggregate — inventories plus receivables less payables, tax payable and provisions — is the one used, because it reconciles exactly to the published figure and to the published ratio of revenue. The narrower definition is not wrong, it is a different measure.
Gross capital expenditure: USD 125.2 million in the presentation against USD 108.8 million in the cash-flow statement	The presentation figure includes the consideration paid for the Pizza Hut Oman subsidiary and initial franchisor fees. The study uses the cash-flow statement figure for the historical record and builds the forecast from restaurant economics, so the acquisition is handled separately rather than embedded in a capital-expenditure ratio.
EBITDA: the company publishes USD 595.6 million for FY2025 and does not define it in the financial statements	The definition was reconstructed from the company's own reconciliation — operating profit plus depreciation and amortisation plus impairments on non-financial and financial assets — and it reproduces the published figure to the nearest thousand dollars in FY2025 and in both halves of 2026. That reconstruction, not the published headline, is what the model uses, so the same definition applies to every forecast year.
Peer multiples: one regional comparator screens at over 100 times EBITDA	That name is running a 2.6% EBITDA margin on a depressed year, so its multiple is arithmetic rather than information. It is shown in the peer table for completeness and excluded from the median, along with any comparator outside a 4-to-40-times band. The exclusion rule is stated rather than applied silently.

7 A note on what this study could not obtain

Two things were wanted and not obtained, and both are recorded in the study itself rather than left to be discovered.

First, a daily history for the Abu Dhabi general index. It was sought from several machine-readable sources and none served a timeseries. The consequence is that the beta regression runs against the index of the company's other home market rather than its primary one. Both currencies are pegged to the dollar and both markets list the same shares, and two independent cross-checks come out lower than the adopted figure, so the effect is to make the cost of equity slightly more conservative rather than less.

Second, a country-level split of the company's restaurant-opening guidance. It is not published at that level. The study allocates the guided total across markets on where the estate has actually been growing, and flags that allocation as an estimate.
